What is a folding carton?

A folding carton is built out of paperboard, and it then goes through a cutting, folding, and lamination process, and then it undergoes printing for transport to a packager. The cartons are sent out flat to a packager, and the company will have its own tools to fold it up into its ultimate shape as a container for an item. The traditional example of a carton like this is a cereal box. People are unaware of just how vital the folding carton is to their daily life and shopping experience. Go to any grocery store and try to pick out a folding carton. You will see them everywhere. The folding carton is responsible for creating the packaging industry that we see today. If it hadn't been created, the packaging industry wouldn't be nearly as important or big as it is. Beginning in the late 1800s, the folding carton rose in use and importance.
